

Part 3: Using Collection Figures

Mind Map Tips

If you create a lot of mind maps, customize your toolbar (via right-click) and add a Mind Map button. Clicking it brings you directly to the Mind Map Gallery, or Option-click to create an instant mind map with the default style.

Normally if you drag-and-drop figures around within a list or mind map, the figures will keep their set styles and not adopt the style of wherever they're being dropped. This way you aren't surprised by Curio suddenly changing your carefully tweaked figure styles. However, if you press and hold the Shift key right before dropping the figures then they will adopt the style.

Add a file attachment to an existing text figure in your mind map by right-clicking on the figure and choosing Attach File. Double-click the idea space link to the right to learn more.

Right-click on the mind figure to quickly change properties such as arrangement, line drawing, and to apply a new style. Right-click on a figure within the mind map to add siblings or children or even prune a branch to a linked mind map collection.

Use the Share toolbar button to export mind maps as OPML or MMAP files. Drag-and-drop OPML or MMAP files into Curio to import them into native Curio mind maps.
